Republican Party of Cuyahoga County fires back at Cleveland.com Article

Cleveland- Last week, Cleveland.com published a column designed to embarrass and demean Peter J. Corrigan's campaign for Cuyahoga County Executive, and the Republican Party of Cuyahoga County. The fake-news article states that the "Cuyahoga County Republican Party has missed an opportunity to potentially weaken the Democrat's stranglehold on county politics," and that "The GOP was unable to recruit a real candidate."

These statements are false.

Rob Frost, Chairman of the Republican Party of Cuyahoga County, when presented with this article replied, "Clearly Armond Budish and the liberal media are scared. As they should be, because the people of this county have had enough of the left's games."

"The only thing the columnist got right is that Budish is vulnerable and rightly so. Yet even with Budish's vulnerability, the amateurish so-called journalist resorted to making up words and name calling. No wonder the Plain Dealer is failing when it cannot be relied upon to report the news.

The County GOP has been supportive of Corrigan's campaign, and will continue to work with his and all Republican campaigns through Election Day.

"Peter J. Corrigan is now in good company with President Trump as a leader that the left wants to tear down because they know he will root out the corruption and get our government working for the people again," said Frost.
